COURT HOUSE FIRE.

Actions Of Insurance Companies
Cause the People to Think.

Last year, when the gang was yelling, and fires were coming most every day and the Firemen Fraternity Company was in trouble, the people became a little skittish and some of them allowed the Old Line agents to persuade them to leave the Old Reliable Hurst Home.

Well, the Hurst Home polled through last year and paid her debt amounting to $6,000 with two calls, one 40 cent and one 60 cent call, or at a total cost of one per cent. Profiting by past experience the officers determined never again to fall into such a trap. They had a right to restore to the reserve fund money formerly used from same and they determined to use these rights and so arrange the business of the company as to keep clear of debt, and while a call less than one per cent. might have carried them through 1902, it would not put aside money to run the company for 6 or 12 months, and in order that such be done, the reserve fund must be restored.

The greater portion of the company had long advocated this policy and when the officers proposed to adopt it, they heartily approved of the measure. Some had been frightened during dark days and fled to the Old Line Companies in order to be sure how much they would have to pay.

Then came the eye-opener. The court house of Bourbon county burned. It had cost $135,000 and was worth about $100,000 the day it burned and had insurance in nearly every company doing business in the county and the total of all policies was but $50,000 or not exceeding half its value.

People naturally suffered as the loss far exceeded the insurance, and as Bourbon county was able to care for itself there would be no trouble. Alas, how often the unexpected come. Instead of prompt payment, these companies offered the county $30,000 when it had for years paid $50,000, and now the county is in the hands of the court of appeals.

If they will do such a thing with Bourbon county, what about a single individual? Again it was supposed the rates on this building were very low, but if we pay on $50,000 and receive but $30,000 we find the rates almost doubled.

Calm and deliberate people are weighing the situation. They say the Hurst Home for 12 years has been in our midst and never yet paid a total for less than the full value of the policy nor ever offered to make such a settlement. Again, the average cost for dwellings, stock barns and tobacco barns, and all for ten years, was but 74.4 cents on the hundred, and at no time and at no year, has it exceeded $1 on the hundred; and this for protection against fire, lightening and wind. Moreover, the payments were either tri-annually or semi-annually while for one year the rates of old line companies are $1.50 on stock barns, $1.25 on wood dwellings and $2.50 on tobacco barns for fire alone and more when a storm or lightening policy is added. And all this must be paid at least a year in advance and after a fire no one can guess the result. It may be 100 cents on the dollar, may be 50 cents and possible a lav suit.

It is no wonder Mr. R. W. Alexander, of Millersburg, the agent of the Hurst Home is being solicited almost daily, to write insurance for the very best people on the very best property.

times and some, all the time but you can not fool all the people all the time."

THE PHILIPPINE WAR.

Secretary Root Makes Answer to the Senate Resolution.

The Cost, Including Outstanding Obligations, Shows That the Total Up to Date is $170,274,586—Table of Expenditures.

Washington, June 20.—Secretary Root Thursday made answer to the senate resolution of April 17 calling for information as to the cost of the war in the Philippines. It is shown that $50,000 was advanced for the expenses of the Philippine commission originally from the United States treasury, but this amount afterwards was reimbursed out of the Philippine treasury. For railroad transportation of troops and supplies to and from the Philippines since the peace treaty was ratified the cost has been $4,803,443.

Reports from the various bureau officers are submitted to show the cost of the Philippine war, including outstanding obligations, showing that the total up to date is $170,274,586.

The expenditures by years were as follows:

Fiscal year	Exp'n'd.	Liab'l'ts.
1898 (2 months)	—May and June	$2,680,850
1899	—	26,230,673
1900	—	50,889,473
1901	—	55,967,422
1902 (10 months)	—July to April	34,499,022
		170,274,586

Secretary Root concludes with the following explanation:

"Attention is invited to the fact that large quantities of valuable property, such as ships, lighters, etc., horses and mules, wagons and harness, clothing, equipment and ordnance, medical, signal and engineer supplies, the cost of which is included in the foregoing statement, still remain on hand in the Philippine islands for use. Parts of these supplies are already being reshipped to this country.

"It should also be observed that a large part of the expense during the past year should not properly be treated as occasioned by military operations in the Philippines for the reason that it consists in pay of maintenance of troops whom we have had to pay and maintain whether they were in the Philippines or not in order to keep up the minimum number of regular troops required by law as a safeguard against future contingencies. The minimum at which the regular army is required to be maintained by the act of February 2, 1901, is 52,967 men, and the maximum is 100,000. We have now less than 10,000 in excess of the minimum number. The cost of that excess only is properly to be treated as occasioned by operations in the Philippines.

"The present scale of expense in the Philippines is, of course, greatly reduced from that shown in the foregoing statement, because of the continuous reduction of the army, made possible by the restoration of peaceful conditions. Thus in the middle of the fiscal year, ending June 30, 1901, there were about 70,000 American soldiers in the islands. That number is now reduced to about 23,000. Orders have now been issued for the return of the 8th, 15th, 24th and 25th infantry, and a squadron of the 10th cavalry, and when these orders have been executed the number of American troops in the Philippines will have been reduced to 18,000. For the past six months we have been bringing troops home, as rapidly as we could do so economically, by the use of our own transports."

POSTAL CURRENCY.

Postmaster General Payne Takes a Strong Position in Its Favor.

Washington, June 20.—Postmaster General Payne takes a strong position in favor of the establishment of a postal currency in a letter he sent to congress Thursday transmitting the reports of the committee appointed to consider pending bill providing for a post check system. He enclosed with his letter a measure drawn by the majority of the committee for enactment by congress, which he believes will meet the end in view. The text of this measure was announced by the press some time ago. In his letter the postmaster general says:

"There is great need of some form of postal currency and that the one proposed is very simple and would prove of incalculable convenience to the public." The postmaster adds:

"Hundreds of thousands of letters carrying small amounts in the form of ordinary currency or silver or postage stamps are transmitted every year through the mails. These letters are a constant temptation to those handling them, as it is easy to identify letters enclosing currency. The postal checks provided for in the proposed bill would be much more easily obtained and cheaper than the present money order and with the extension of the rural free delivery service to the remote parts of the country would go far to provide a cheap, convenient and safe method to transmit small amounts through the mails, and would be available in those sections not heretofore covered by or adjacent to the money-order offices or the banks of the country."

EXPLOSION IN A POWDER MILL.

Four Men Killed and Four Injured Near Johnstown, Pa.

Johnstown, Pa., June 20.—The colaling mill of the Cambria Powder Co. plant at Seward, 19 miles from Johnstown, blew up Thursday afternoon, killing three men and injuring five others, one of whom has since died. Two others are fatally hurt.

The explosion occurred as the men were loading a pot of powder on a wagon driven by John Rhodes. Suddenly there was an explosion and the flames flew in every direction. The powder, adhering to the clothing of the men, ignited and burned into the flesh of the victims. A strange feature of the accident was the fact that one of the men, Charles Drover, was able to walk 300 yards from the scene of the explosion before he fell dead from his terrible burns. His flesh, like that of the other victims, was burned to a crisp. The shanty in which the colaling mill is located was ignited by the explosion of the powder and was burned to the ground, but the financial loss is slight.

GEN. J. K. SMITH.

Ordered to Proceed to San Francisco and Await Further Orders.

Washington, June 20.—Gen. J. K. Smith, who recently was court-martialed in Manila, has been instructed to proceed to San Francisco and there await further orders. Just before he was ordered to travel Gen. Smith had been ordered to the United States to take command of the vacant department of Texas. The execution of that order was suspended and still is pending the proceedings of the court-martial, but there remains no reason for his detention in the Philippines. Although not officially admitted the fact that Gen. Smith has been called home is accepted in military circles generally as practical confirmation of the press dispatches from Manila that he was acquitted.

CLEVELAND AND HILL.

They Address a Gathering of Representative Democrats.

New York, June 20.—Democratic unity was the keynote Thursday night of a great gathering of representative democrats who had come to attend the opening of the handsome new quarters of the Tilden club. Addresses were made by prominent democrats and afterwards a collation was served in the banquet hall to the distinguished guests of the evening and a buffet supper was served in the basement for the rank and file.

To democrats the event was one of the most memorable for many a day, as Grover Cleveland and David B. Hill met in harmony, seeking to draw the factions of their party together.

A Sympathetic Strike.

Newcastle, Pa., June 20.—A general strike of the Building Trades' unions of this city was inaugurated here Thursday in sympathy with the striking journeymen plumbers who are demanding an increase from $3 to $3.50 for an eight-hour day.

Electric Roads in St. Petersburg. St. Petersburg, June 20.—The ministry of the interior has approved the municipality's proposal to electrify the street railroads owned by the city and the municipal authorities have been authorized to accept a favorable bid for their construction.

Reduction of Military Service.

Paris, June 20.—The senate began the discussion of M. Rolland's bill providing for the reduction of the term of military service to two years which, as the premier, M. Combes, announced in the ministerial declaration, the government supports.

Will Act as Lord Chamberlain.

London, June 20.—In consequence of the illness of the earl of Clarendon, the lord chamberlain, Lord Churchill, one of the lords in waiting, has been appointed to act as lord chamberlain for the coronation festivities.

THE SUPPLY OF COAL.

In Case of a General Strike it Would Soon Be Exhausted.

There Are Approximately 450,000 Miners in the Country, Scattered in 30 States—Twenty-Four States Would Be Involved.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 21.—It is estimated by W. B. Wilson, secretary and treasurer of the United Mine Workers' of America, that the present supply of bituminous and anthracite coal above ground would be exhausted in less than three months, if there should be a general suspension of work in the mines. According to this estimate, if the national convention of the mine workers in Indianapolis July 17 should vote for a general suspension of work, in support of the anthracite strike, as is now proposed, the vast industrial machinery of the United States would be handicapped for fuel so that thousands of factories would have to suspend work.

Wilson has statistics showing there are approximately 450,000 miners in the country, scattered through 30 states. The miners of 24 states would be actively involved if there should be a suspension of operations. In Idaho, Nevada, California, the Dakotas, North Carolina and two or three other states brown coal, known as lignite, is mined, but the organization did not take these states into consideration when it issued a call Thursday for the national convention.

There are now over 300,000 members of the mine workers' organization. Mr. Wilson says that nearly every non-union man would go out if a general suspension of work should be ordered. During the first anthracite strike two years ago there were only 8,000 anthracite men in the organization, yet over 125,000 went out.

The anthracite organization now includes 147,000 men; since the strike was ordered a few days ago the Virginia and West Virginia men have been flocking to the union.

In Indiana 10,800 men are employed in and about the mines. The Indiana operators have a short supply of coal on hand. Probably the largest supply of coal is the bins at Buffalo, N. Y., and in other cities along the great lakes. Mr. Wilson says it is impossible to keep a large supply of bituminous coal, because of liability of loss from spontaneous combustion.

Anthracite can be stored indefinitely but the supply in the collieries is now running short. The bituminous mines in most localities are being worked at capacity, but the supply is shorter than usual.

Canada has no coal on which this country could draw if there should be a general tie up. The British isles might supply a part of the market, but at a price that would be almost prohibitive to the manufacturers and ordinary consumers. The tariff on imported coal is 60 cents a ton more than the miners receive as a rule for mining in the United States.

At the coming convention the belief is that the competitive district—Western Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio and Illinois—will take a stand against a general strike. These states have contracts that they do not want to break. The combined vote of the competitive district with that of Iowa is expected to prove strong enough to prevent the success of the proposition for a general strike.

There are a number of states whose agreements expire July 1 and it will depend largely on the outcome of the deliberations between their operators and miners as to where the balance of power will lie in the convention.

MILITARY ACADEMY BILL.

The Senate and House Conferees Reached An Agreement.

Washington, June 21.—The senate and house conferees on the military academy appropriation bill reached an agreement. The senate receded from its amendment increasing to the extent of $1,000,000 the fixed cost of the new buildings at West Point, leaving the figure as placed by the house at $5,500,000. The amendment providing for purchase of Constitution Island, New York, also was stricken out. Most of the other senate amendments were accepted.

FOR REST, FEED AND WATER.

Bill Providing That Cattle, in Transit, Should Be Unloaded Every 40 Hours.

Washington, June 21.—The cattle interests of the southwest have been objecting to the provision of the law that live stock shall be unloaded from cars every 28 hours for rest, feed and water, and the house committee on commerce ordered a favorable report on a bill urged by these interests fixing the period at 40 hours. This is claimed to insure humane treatment and not unduly to burden the cattle shippers.

Transport Hancock Arrives.

San Francisco, June 21.—The United States transport Hancock arrived Friday night from Manila. The Hancock brings the headquarters and ten companies of the 9th infantry, besides 400 enlisted men, 300 casualties and 50 military prisoners.

The Gunboat Marietta.

Washington, June 21.—The gunboat Marietta has left the New York navy yard under orders to proceed to San Juan, P. R. Here the gunboat will lie for a short time to await developments in Venezuela.

PARTIALLY AGREED UPON.

Amendment to the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill.

Washington, June 21.—The conferees for the two houses of congress Friday reached a partial agreement on the amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill made by the senate. Among the more important amendments agreed to were the following:

The provisions for a rebate on tobacco amounting to $2,700,000; the marine hospital at New York, $250,000; on account of the revenue cutter service, $115,000; on account of the geological survey, $106,000; on account of printing and binding, $220,000. The reductions in conference amounted in the aggregate to $1,210,285, including $260,000 for improvements at Governor's Island, N. Y.; $250,000 for the purchase of the census building at Washington; $218,386 for engraving and printing; $100,000 on the survey of the boundary between the United States and Canada and $100,000 for a revenue cutter for Hawaii. The total appropriation carried by the items of the bill which were disagreed to and on which there will be a further conference amounts to $1,283,950. The point of their dispute provisions are an increase of $790,850 on account of light houses; $300,000 on account of military posts and $100,000 on account of the proposed memorial bridge across the Potomac at Washington, D. C.

Under the instructions of a special resolution the conferees considered subject of immediate appropriation for the new public buildings authorized by the omnibus building bill and added $5,348,591 on that account. The provisions for the improvement of the white house amounts to $475,445, while $65,300 is added for the construction of a building to be devoted to offices for the white house force.

Following are the principal appropriations for public buildings at places made by the conferees: Atlanta, Ga., $170,000; Hartford, Ct., $50,000; Minneapolis, Minn., $25,000; Memphis, Tenn., $25,000; Philadelphia, $25,000 additional for mint building; Portland, Ore., $35,000; Richmond, Va., $75,000; Rochester, N. Y., $40,000; San Francisco, $25,000; Colorado Springs, Col., $30,000; Elizabeth, N. J., $60,000; Hammond, Ind., $30,000; Holyoke, Mass., $40,000; Laredo, Tex., $35,000; Meriden, Ct., $40,000; Waterbury, Ct., $45,000; Spokane, Wash., $100,000; Tacoma, Wash., $100,000; Des Moines, Ia., $150,000; Los Angeles, Cal., $200,000; New Orleans, La., $200,000; New York, $25,000; Providence, R. I., $25,000; St. Louis, $210,000; Toledo, O., $82,000; Washington, D. C., $600,000; Wheeling, W. Va., $25,000.

GOV. TAFT'S PROPOSITIONS.

The Vatican Consents to the Sale of the Friars' Lands.

Rome, June 21.—The papal secretary of state, Cardinal Rampolla, assured Rt. Rev. Thomas O'Gorman, bishop of Sioux Falls, S. D., that the vatican accepts the proposition of Judge Taft, governor of the Philippines, regarding the disposition of the friar lands on all the main points, but dissents on minor points.

The principal propositions presented by Gov. Taft to the vatican are as follows:

First—The purchase of land of the friars, the price to be fixed by arbitration.

Second—The arbitrators to decide the indemnity which the Americans will pay for occupation of the ecclesiastical buildings.

Third—The above propositions absolutely conditional on the withdrawal of the friars.

Fourth—If the other propositions are accepted the Americans propose to give a deed or by law to grant a patent to the ecclesiastical buildings on public land.

Fifth—To settle by compromise or arbitration the several trusts for schools, hospitals, etc., claimed on the one hand by the civil, on the other by the church authorities.

ADDITIONAL MINES IDLE.

The Workers at Marmet and Plymouth, W. Va., Go Out.

Charleston, W. Va., June 21.—Two additional mines were idle Friday, that at Marmet and the one at Plymouth. Friday a committee from the Winifred visited Marmet and had a talk with the men. A vote was taken and the majority voted for going out, whereupon all declined to go in again. The best of feeling prevails. At Marmet, where the deputies are enforcing the state court injunction, there is no trouble.

Maine Battleship Sufferers.

Washington, June 21.—Representative Mahon, of Pennsylvania, Friday introduced a bill authorizing the secretary of the navy to determine just compensation to the sufferers from the destruction of the battleship Maine and appropriating $1,230,000 for adjustment of these claims, the limit for cases of personal injury being placed at $5,000 and on account of death $3,000.

There Will Be No Strike.

Trenton, N. J., June 21.—A joint committee of manufacturers and the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters agreed upon a uniform scale for the making of sanitary pottery ware. There has been no strike and will be none.

Capt. Freeman's Gallantry Recognized. London, June 21.—The board of trade has awarded a handsome piece of plate to Capt. Freeman, of the British steamer Roddam, in recognition of his gallantry at St. Pierre, Martinique when that town was destroyed.

VALUABLE TIMBER.

Miles of It Were Destroyed in Colorado By Forest Fires.

Salida, Col., June 21.—Forest fires in the vicinity of Mount Ararat, southwest of this city, have swept up one gulch and down another, burning miles and miles of valuable timber. A new fire started Thursday at Mills Switch, seven miles from the Summit Marshall Pass, on the western slope, and in very thick timber. It is less than 15 feet from the Rio Grande tracks, and the smoke blinds the trainmen as they pass through.

Tacoma, Wash., June 21.—The fire department of this city has sent men, engines and hose on a special train to Buckley, in this county, which is threatened with complete destruction by forest fires, raging between that town and Enumclaw, King county. A great cloud of smoke hangs over Tacoma, 33 miles from Buckley. The Mountain mill, two miles east of Buckley, burned Friday. Undoubtedly many lives of mountain campers and loggers have been lost.

Enumclaw is also threatened with destruction. The whole population is fighting the flames but the water works has been burned and the work of protecting the town is difficult. The wind is blowing a gale, and much farm property already has been destroyed. The damage to timber and buildings in the town is over $100,000. About 40 women and children were shut off by the fire from reaching the town, and are suffering greatly from heat and smoke. Twenty buildings and a large mill are burning. Everybody is ready to remove and wagons are being loaded.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

All Arrangements Made For His Visit in Michigan.

Washington, June 21.—Mayor William C. Maybury, of Detroit, accompanied by Senator McMillan, saw the president and completed arrangements for the president's visit to Detroit on the occasion of the convention of the Spanish war veterans in that city in September. The president will arrive in Detroit Sunday morning, September 21, and will remain there possibly until Monday afternoon. He will be given an opportunity to review the parade of Spanish war veterans and has promised to address the convention. In addition to the members of the cabinet invitations have been extended to Adms. Dewey and Schley and Gens. Miles, Wheeler and Fitzhugh Lee, who have indicated their intention to be present if possible.

From Detroit the president will go to Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids.

Invitations to visit cities in the west continue to pour in on the president. Representative Cochran, of Missouri, on behalf of the people of St. Joseph, requested the president to include that city in his itinerary. Representative Morris, of Minnesota, said the people of Duluth wanted him and Representative Irwin, of Kentucky, tendered a flattering request to visit Louisville. In each case the president said he would be pleased to consider the invitations.

ILLINOIS ANTI-TRUST LAW.

It Is Held to Be Unconstitutional and Void in All Its Parts.

Chicago, June 21.—In a decision given by Judge Elbridge G. Haney, of the state circuit court, held that the Illinois anti-trust law of 1891 is unconstitutional and void in all its parts. He ordered a finding in favor of the defendant in the case of the people in relation of the attorney general against the Butler Street Foundry and Iron Co. By Judge Haney's decision practically all that was left of the anti-trust statutes of Illinois are declared to be a nullity. In the 53 other cases similar to the one passed upon by the court a like finding was entered pursuant to a stipulation among the attorneys in the case.

LIFE SAVING SERVICE.

Bill Providing For Pensions For Members Favorably Reported.

Washington, June 21.—The bill providing pensions for members of the life saving service was ordered favorably reported by the house committee on commerce. The pension rate provided is the same for the members of crew as that paid seamen in the navy or privates in the army and the rate to the superintendent of a station is the same as to a captain in the navy. In favoring the measure the committee took the view that this was not the creation of a civil pension list, as the perils of life saving are analogous to those of military or naval life, and the life savers also perform coast patrol duty in time of war.

Import Duties Increased.

Washington, June 21.—United States Charge Beaupre, at Bogota, reports to the state department that by a decree of the 9th inst. the Colombian government has increased import duties on all foreign merchandise from July 1 next.

Another Big Corporation.

Chicago, June 21.—The Chronicle announced Saturday that a New Jersey corporation, rivaling the U. S. Steel corporation in magnitude is projected. It plans to be a billion dollar concern. It may be called the American Meat Co.

Mrs. Gov. Taft in Rome.

Rome, June 21.—Mrs. Taft and her children, together with Capt. Strother, arrived in Rome Friday. They were received at the station by Gov. Taft. The pope will receive Mrs. Taft and her eldest daughter in audience.

CONGRESSMAN FITZPATRICK

Says Pe-ru-na is a Splendid Catarrhal Tonic.

Congressman T. Y. Fitzpatrick.

Hon. T. Y. Fitzpatrick, Congressman from Kentucky, writes from the National Hotel, Washington, D. C., as follows:

"At the solicitation of a friend I used your Pe-ru-na and can cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone suffering with catarrh or who needs a good tonic."—T. Y. FITZPATRICK.

A Good Tonic.

Pe-ru-na is a natural and efficient nerve tonic. It strengthens and restores the activity of every nerve in the body.

Through the use of Pe-ru-na the weakened or overworked nerves resume their natural strength and the blood vessels begin at once to regulate the flow of blood according to nature's laws. Congestions immediately disappear.

Catarrh Cured.

All phases of catarrh, acute or chronic, are promptly and permanently cured. It is through its operation upon the nervous system that Pe-ru-na has attained such a world-wide reputation as a sure and reliable remedy for all phases of catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Pe-ru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice free.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

CORONATION WEEK.

After Rainy Weather it Opened With Bright Sunshine.

Count Von Waldersee and the German Officers With Him Were Entertained at Dinner By Field Marshal Lord Roberts Sunday.

London, June 23.—The reappearance Sunday of brilliant sunshine after weeks of rain and murky weather gave to the first day of coronation week an air of unusual gaiety and gladdened the hearts of thousands of British subjects from all parts of the empire and thousands of foreigners who are pouring into London eager to witness as much of this week's events as possible. The announcement that King Edward, Queen Alexandra and the court would return to London from Windsor Monday at noon increased the universal anticipations for that day and served to quiet, to some extent, the flood of extraordinary rumors concerning the king's physical condition, varied in some quarters by weird tales of plots to assassinate his majesty and other fictions all of which have been promptly denied by the officials most intimately connected with the king.

King Edward's health was authoritatively declared to be good at Windsor castle Sunday, and Sunday morning his majesty attended divine services accompanied by other members of the royal family. Sunday evening he enjoyed a drive through the royal gardens of Windsor castle in a closed carriage.

At the command of the king many thousands of persons were admitted to the east terrace of Windsor castle Sunday afternoon for the Sunday band performance. The terrace was crowded. The king and the queen listened to the music from the windows of their private apartments. King Edward's appearance does not justify the sensational rumors of his illness. The congested condition of the streets of London throughout Sunday furnished an omen of the conditions of travel through these streets the latter days of this week. The barriers across the streets which intersect those through which the coronation procession will pass, and which have now been completed, are proving an impediment to ordinary traffic.

Kensington Gardens and the beautiful groves about the Crystal and Alexandra palaces are filled with colonial and native troops clad in scarlet, white, khaki and blue uniforms.

The throngs in the street at night find much to engage the eye. The fronts of innumerable buildings are hung with lighted decorations and the venetian masts are covered with garlands and connected by strands of roses. The streets are filled with mille after mille of many colored lights and the various stations of the royal coronation procession are marked with arches representing Great Britain's colonies. American flags were in evidence at a great number of windows. Some hotels are flying both American and British flags from their staffs, in honor of the many American visitors domiciled within. Count Von Waldersee, one of the German representatives to the coronation; the duke and duchess of Aosta, from Italy, and many other distinguished representatives of foreign royal personages arrived at London Sunday.

Count Von Waldersee and the German officers with him were entertained at dinner Sunday night by Field Marshal Lord Roberts. In toasting King Edward and the British army Count Von Waldersee paid a high compliment to Earl Roberts.

Replying to the German officer's remarks Earl Roberts complimented Count Von Waldersee upon his services in China and warmly thanked him in behalf of the British army for his allusions to its work in South Africa. Earl Roberts concluded by calling for a toast to Emperor William and the German army.

CHOLERA ATTACKS SOLDIERS.

Ninety Have Died in the Philippines Since the Disease Broke Out.

Manila, June 23.—Ninety American soldiers have died of cholera since the disease first broke out. Owing to the increase of cholera the health authorities here and in the provinces are enforcing stringent regulations. The total number of cases and deaths from the epidemic are as follows: Manila, 1,530 cases and 1,236 deaths; provinces, 7,369 cases and 5,440 deaths.

CHINESE CRUISER WRECKED.

One Hundred and Fifty Officers and Men Lost Their Lives.

London, June 23.—A dispatch to the Central News from Shanghai says that the Chinese cruiser Kai-Chi was wrecked Sunday by a terrific explosion while laying in the Yang Tse river. The Kai-Chi sank in 30 seconds and 150 officers and men on board were killed or drowned. Only two men on board the cruiser escaped death.

Victory For United States.

Quebec, June 23.—Judge Andrews discharged the motion for contempt against Detective Carpenter, and has remanded Messrs. Gaynor and Green, charged with embezzling United States funds, to Montreal in charge of the jailer of that city.

Capt. Wild to Be Reprimanded.

Manila, June 23.—Capt. Frederick S. Wild, of the 13th infantry, has been sentenced by court-martial to be reprimanded for the burning of a native cock pit at Lingayen, province of Pangasinan, Luzon.

AT A GARDEN PARTY.

A Fight in Which One Man Was Killed and Three Fatally Wounded.

Knoxville, Tenn., June 23.—An attack upon the American army in the Philippines, made at a garden party here, started a desperate fight, which cost four lives. One man is dead and three others, including the traducer of the soldiers and a discharged regular, recently returned from Manila, who defended the name of the military, were probably fatally wounded. Lincoln Monday, who served three years in the archipelago as a member of the 9th infantry, and who is a survivor of the massacre of Company C at Balangiga, Samar, gave Alonzo Barger the lie when the latter declared that "two-thirds of the American soldiers who went to the Philippines were hoodlums and the other third were cowards and bullies."

In the fight that followed, Charles Hobbs and John Kennedy took the part of Barger. All fought with knives, until Monday, weak from the loss of blood, sank to the ground. Then one of his friends in the crowd handed him a revolver and he shot Kennedy dead. Monday then shot at Barger and Hobbs, but failed to hit either.

COLOMBIAN REVOLUTION.

The Town of Agua Dulce Was Captured Last Thursday.

Panama, Colombia, June 23.—The fleet of government gunboats returned here Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock with the news that the town of Agua Dulce had been captured Thursday, June 19.

As the government forces approached Agua Dulce over 100 government soldiers who had been previously captured by revolutionary forces under Gen. Herrera and had been incorporated in the liberal army, joined the government troops under command of Gen. Bertli.

Agua Dulce was captured without resistance. The government boats went up the bay as far as the town itself. When the revolutionists sighted them they fled from the town, leaving behind 300 head of cattle and one sailing vessel full of produce.

JUMPED THE TRACK.

Two Trainmen Killed, Five Seriously Hurt and Passengers Injured.

St. Paul, Minn., June 23.—A passenger train on the Sioux City branch of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroad, due to arrive in St. Paul at 7:25 a. m., jumped the track near Ashton, Ia., early Sunday. Two trainmen were killed, five others seriously hurt and a number of passengers received minor injuries.

The passengers injured were attended by surgeons who were brought to the scene of the wreck on a wrecking train and all were able to continue their journey.

The cause of the wreck is said to have been a misplaced switch. The train was running at a high rate of speed and when it left the track the mail cars and smoker piled up on top of the engine. The sleeping cars also left the track, but did not overturn.

DYNAMITERS' WORK.

Deliberate Attempts Made to Wreck a Circus Train.

Duluth, Minn., June 23.—Dynamiters early Sunday made what is believed was a deliberate attempt to wreck a circus train bound for Duluth on the Northern Pacific railroad at a point between Maple and Poplar, Wis. In seven different places between these two points the track was blown up by dynamite and no trace of the perpetrators has been found. The first explosion occurred at 3 a. m. just as a freight train was nearing Maple. The train was brought to an abrupt stop and sentinels were sent along the track towards Poplar to warn the incoming circus specials.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

Six Blocks of Buildings Were Destroyed at Portland, Ore.

Portland, Ore., June 23.—A fire that started shortly before midnight Saturday night in the Phoenix iron works, formerly the Wolff & Zwicker plant, on East Madison and East Water streets, burned for four hours and destroyed six blocks of buildings valued at $600,000. The insurance amounted to about $200,000. It was long after daylight before the fire burned itself out.

The Boat Capsized.

St. Louis, June 23.—Four boys were drowned Sunday evening by the capsizing of a boat at Fern Glen, a resort 15 miles from here. They are: Eddie Flynn, 17 years old; Robert Regan, 16 years old; Peter Larkin, 17 years old; Alphonse Kerns, 16 years old. The drowning occurred at the annual picnic of the St. Louis turnverein. The boys were rowing in a skiff on the Meramec river when it capsized and the occupants were thrown out.

Will Recognize the Union.

Altoona, Pa., June 23.—The 300 bituminous miners who since April have been on a strike at the Sonmar shaft to force the operators to recognize the union, have succeeded in obtaining recognition and will return to work at once.

Trolley Cars Collide.

Philadelphia, June 23.—A score of persons were injured in a collision of trolley cars at Chestnut Hill, a suburb, but the majority of the victims proceeded to their homes after being treated at a hospital.

RIOTS IN TORONTO.

Efforts to Run Cars With New Men Caused Acts of Violence.

Toronto, Ont., June 23.—The first attempt made by the Toronto street railway to run their cars with men hired to take the places of the striking motormen and conductors was met with violence. Only one effort was made to reopen the traffic, and the temper shown by the strikers and their sympathizers convinced the officials that it would be impossible to run cars without strong protection. It was therefore decided to appeal to the authorities for troops and to suspend operations until their arrival Monday morning.

Stones, sticks, eggs and stale vegetables were the weapons used by the strike sympathizers to prevent the railway company from giving a service. Several of the imported men were roughly handled by the mob, and Motorman Johnson, an old employee of the company, came near losing his life.

The worst riots occurred at the corner of Scollard and Yonge and Eloor and Yonge, in proximity to the Yorkville barns. Very few arrests were made.

Sunday morning cars were started simultaneously from the barns at Kings street west, Queen street west, Yorkville, Dundas and Yonge streets. A crowd had gathered about the entrances of the barns awaiting developments. The appearance of a car at the Yonge street barn was the signal for hooting and yelling by the crowd. The car was run out to the main track and the conductor gave the motorman the signal to go ahead. The crowd called upon the crew to desert the car. Their refusal to do so was followed by a shower of stones and bricks. Every window in the car was smashed and the crew left their posts and ran into the barn.

An attempt was made to run a car from the Yorkville barns around the belt line. A big stone thrown against the window dashed the glass into Motorman Johnson's face, badly lacerating it. He was struck by a number of stones and was otherwise maltreated. Johnson persevered, however, and made the circuit of the line.

The attempt to run out five cars at the King street east barns at 8 o'clock was attended by scenes of the greatest disorder and violence, several persons being injured by flying missiles, including W. H. Moore, private secretary to Mr. Mackenzie, president of the road, who was severely injured in the face by a brick. Three arrests were made. All five cars were badly shattered in less than five minutes after they made their appearance. Motorman Quigley was struck on the head by a stone and badly injured.

Meantime the civil authorities were communicated with, and it was decided to call out the militia. Seven hundred and fifty mounted men from the Niagara camp, consisting of 250 rifles of the governor general's bodyguard, 200 mounted rifles and 200 men of the 1st and 2d dragons left Niagara with their horses in three special trains at 10 o'clock Sunday night, and will arrive at daylight. In addition 300 of the Queen's own, 300 grenadiers and 200 highlanders have been ordered to parade at the armories. Several hundred extra policemen were also sworn in Sunday night.

SYMPATHETIC STRIKE.

Silk Workers in the Hudson County, New Jersey, Mills Are Out.

New York, June 23.—Twelve hundred silk workers employed in the Hudson county (N. J.) mills met Sunday night at West Hoboken and decided not to go to work Monday morning. These workers represented about five per cent. of all the employees in the mills of that section. The move is made to express sympathy with the Paterson mill workers who are out. Those at the meeting declared no violence would be attempted, but as soon as the police board heard of the action taken they made preparation to protect all workers who want to go to the mills.

Mayor Groth, of Union Hill, N. J., swore in 300 special policemen Sunday as a precautionary measure against any trouble that may arise in his town Monday. The same step was taken by the authorities of North Bergen. All these places are contiguous to Paterson.

Maj. Gen. Wheaton Arrives.

San Francisco, June 23.—Maj. Gen. Lloyd Wheaton, who arrived Saturday evening from the Philippines on the United States transport Sherman, which was held in quarantine, returns in fairly good health. His long stay in the islands and the responsibilities he has had have aged him greatly.

Governor of the Transvaal.

Pretoria, June 23.—Lord Milner, who was British high commissioner in South Africa, took the oath as governor of the Transvaal here Sunday in the presence of a large assemblage of people. He was heartily cheered by those present and a salute in his honor was fired from the fort.

Died on the Voyage.

San Francisco, June 23.—During the voyage there were three deaths—Private Wm. E. Carlisle, of Troop C, 1st cavalry; Private Wm. R. Morris, of Company C, 7th infantry; Sgt. Geo. W. Huyck, of Company C, 6th infantry.

An Abundant Harvest.

London, June 23.—A dispatch from Odessa published Sunday morning in the Standard says that reports received there from all the black soil grain producing regions of Southern Russia indicate abundant crops.

Vilest Wretch on Record.

Husband (kindly)—My dear, you have nothing to wear, have you? Wife (with alacrity)—No, indeed, I haven't; not a thing. I'll be ashamed to be seen anywhere. My very newest party dress has been worn three times already.

Husband—Yes, that's just what I told Blifkins when he offered me two tickets for the opera to-night. I knew if I took them they'd only be wasted, so I just got one. You won't mind if I hurry off?—Tit-Bits.

A Spoil Story.

Brown (in the middle of tall shooting story)—Hardly had I taken aim at the lion on my right when I heard a rustle in the jungle grass, and perceived an enormous tiger approaching on my left. I now found myself on the horns of a dilemma!

Interesting Little Boy—Oh, and which did you shoot first—the lion, or the tiger, or the dilemma?—London Punch.

Bob—Son-in-law.—Chicago Daily News.

Going Down Hill.

Miss McSpurge—Why do you take on so over papa's failure, ma? This isn't the first time he has had to call his creditors together.

Mrs. McSpurge (weeping)—Y-e-s, but this time he hasn't failed for enough to be respectable. Boo, hoo, hoo!—N. Y. Weekly.

Consolation.

Mrs. Subbub (engaging cook)—I'm sure you and I will get along together first-rate, but I want to tell you right now that my husband is a very hard man to please.

The Cook—Well, don't worry, dear; it's aisy fer yez t' git a divorce, these days.—Brooklyn Life.

Preparing for Coming Events.

Binks—Why did Risley join the priesthood—is he grieving so over his wife's death?

Minks—Not he. His wife was a theosophist, and believed in reincarnation. She prophesied she'd be back in six years, so Risley's gone in for celibacy.—Town Topics.

So Hon. John W. Yerkes is to be the Republican sacrificial calf. We are very fond of Mr. Yerkes "when he is good."
A good Indian is a dead Indian, and we hope Mr. Yerkes will not allow his

The Kentucky Board of Prison Commissioners have leased 400 Kentucky convicts to a company for fifty cents a day. This is the highest ever received in the State for convict labor. It will put the two penitentiaries on a paying basis and make it cheaper to send a man to the pen than to keep him in our county jails. Considering that a fellow earns a trade when in the pen, it would be better if our juries would send as many as possible there instead of letting them run loose over the country at their old tactics of stealing and committing other crimes. —Larue Herald.

Wm. J. Bryan, in an interview the other day at Kansas City, said: "It is too early yet to say what the issues will be at the next presidential campaign. I think imperialism will be one of the principal ones, judging from the action of the House. The money question will also come up again. As to what part free silver will play I cannot say. The Republicans fear to discuss the Fowler bill. They say that the money question is a corpse, but the corpse has so much life in it that they fear to push this bill before election, and have postponed it until the second session."
"The trust question will also come up for consideration in the next campaign.
At the present time Democratic chances

The "Royal Muskoka."

The opening up of the Highlands of Ontario, Canada, and the beautiful Muskoka Lake region has been a veritable labour of love to the advertising department of the Grand Trunk Railway and the coming summer promises such an influx of American tourists as will amply justify the outlay in hotel accommodation which has been recently made. The "Royal Muskoka," in fact, promises to become to Canada, in summer, what the "Royal Ponciana" is to Florida in the winter months, the fashionable resort of the continent, where the romantic and the beautiful can be enjoyed with all the luxury and comfort of the most modern hotel life.
The "Royal Muskoka" which has been built at the cost of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, very much resembles the architecture of the famous Flagler hotels, soft gray stone walls, timbered across under its red-tiled roof,
with deep cool verandahs, commanding views of the surrounding lakes and islands. It has accommodations for 400 guests and is the finest summer hotel in Canada. For all information as to Frozen Stiff!

That Air
of Elegance

which so surely marks the man of good taste—that unquestionable faultlessness in every dainty detail of cut, pattern and fabric—is a distinguishing attribute of the

for the season of 1902. A surprising variety of styles, at prices surprisingly low. Your decision will please you —if the garment be selected from this line.

It is not necessary to be frozen stiff in order to keep cool. Just do as a sensible man should do. Don't over-exercise, avoid all excitement, keep sweet, dress dress to suit the weather and defy the weather clerk.
Drink plenty of cool water—not ice cold—and wear one of our SUMMER SUITS. Eat very little meat, but wear our Straw Fedora Hat. Bathe the MISSED HIS MONEY.—Abe Wollstein, brother of "the other twin," of this city, took $13 from the money drawer at his store at Falmouth and placed the money in his pocket intending to go to Cincinnati the next morning. But at the breakfast table the money was found missing with no clue to its departure. He remained at home.

A GOOD PLACE.—The neatest and most popular tontorial parlor in the city is the new place of Carl Crawford adjoining the Bourbon Bank. Everything new, except the barbers who are old in experience. If you want the best service in the way of shave, hair cut or bath, give Carl a call and you will be treated right. (30maytf)

RURAL DELIVERY MAIL BOXES.—Those who are to receive the benefit of the free rural delivery of the mail are requested by the government to put up an approved box. W. G. Kerr, of North Middle town, has the agency for two boxes. He is now canvassing the routes and meeting with splendid success. He has two good boxes. See him and give him your order. (24jun-26)

FOR LIFE.

The Verdict in the G. Wright Case—A Hard Fought Battle.

The jury in the J. W. ("G") Wright murder case, after being out about thirty minutes, brought in a verdict on Saturday morning, of confinement in the penitentiary for life. There has probably been no case in the Circuit Court in years that has excited so much interest as this one, which was on trial for eleven days.

The court room was crowded to hear the able speeches of both the defense and prosecution.

Hon. E. M. Dickson was the first to speak, appearing for the defense, and made one of the finest speeches of his life, covering the case thoroughly. He was followed by Hon. Ohas. J. Bronston, for the prosecution, who delivered probably the strongest speech in the case. Col. Breckinridge, for the defense, and Robert Franklin, for the prosecution, also made strong speeches. The latter spoke for three hours in a clear, forcible and dramatic way.

It is said that Wright's attorneys will make the usual motion for a new trial.

COURT NEWS:

The grand jury returned the following indictments:

Mag and Tom Harris, suffering a nuisance.

Moore & Petticord, suffering gaming.

M. L. Woods, suffering gaming.

Newton Current, suffering gaming.

D.D. Connors, setting up slot machine, etc.

Same, selling liquor to minor.

Same, selling liquor to minor.

John Schwartz, selling liquor to minor.

Desha Lucas, etc., suffering a nuisance, (pool room.)

Henry Botts, shooting with intent to kill.

Lewis Rankin, house breaking.

Wallace Steele, etc., suffering nuisance, (pool room.)

Ollie Steele, malicious striking with intent to kill.

Thos. Sallee, suffering gaming on premises.

City of Paris, permitting nuisance.

O'Brien & James, suffering gaming on premises.

The court adjourned on Saturday to this morning.

TELEPHONE.—A number of linemen of the Fayette Telephone Company arrived in the city yesterday and began work.

LUCKY.—Talbot Bros., of this city, won a race at Chicago on Saturday with Wain-a-moines, the value of which was $800.

FIRE.—An alarm of fire from box 24, called out the department at 10:15 on Sunday night to Childer's grocery on the corner of Eighth and Sycamore streets. There was a small loss.

BLUE LICK.—Fresh Blue Lick Water can be found on sale at C. B. Mitchell's, W. T. Brooks', and at J. Frank Prather's. GEO. T. LYONS, Agent.

SUCCESS TO PARIS DOCTORS.—Mr. Charles Barnett, of St. Joseph, Mo., will arrive to-day to accompany his wife home. She has been under the skillful treatment of Drs. R. T. and M. C. Wood for double curvature of the spine, for the past five months. She has been a sufferer for six years. The brace and juremast which she has worn for five months was removed, and the diseased bones were found to have ossified, which effects a permanent cure. Her many friends will be glad to hear of her recovery, as they had despaired of ever seeing her out of the braces, let alone being well.

A. O. U. W. ENTERTAINMENT.—The entertainment to be given at the Opera House on Friday, July Fourth, by Garth Lodge, A. O. U. W., of this city, for the benefit of the charity fund of the lodge, will prove to be a surprise to those who attend. The very laughable comedy, "The Great Label Case," will be presented. This is one of the funniest comedies ever written, and will keep the audience in a constant roar of laughter. In addition to this several first-class vaudeville features will be introduced. The lodge has offered a prize of five dollars to the child selling the most tickets, and several are already competing for it. Tickets may be obtained now at Borland's Paint Store, and be exchanged for reserved seats on July 2d. The admission price is 35 cents. The great amount of good done by this order in their quiet and unassuming way, should be encouraged by a large attendance at their entertainment.

THE Garth Fund beneficiaries will meet the Commissioners on July 2d, at the City School. They must bring teachers' reports and text books last used.

New applicants will be examined the following day at the same place. They also must present reports of last school attended and duly certified statements or their need of the benefaction.

Meet promptly at 9 o'clock.

E. F. CLAY,
E. M. DICKSON,
GEO. VARDEN,
Commissioners.

"IF."

I wonder if 'twould matter much,
If I some day should fold my hands
And never more a task should touch
So long as in the glass the sands Should run for me—I wonder would
The world be just as fair and good?

If I some day should stay my feet
That know the path of duty plain,
And selfish, wander from the heat,
The hurra of soul, the cries of pain,
And pamper self in solitude—
Would I be missed for my lost good?

If I should some day steel my heart
To answer neither prayer nor prayer,
Refuse to do my little part,
Of my best good refuse to share,
With some one who was sick and poor:
Be deaf to cries outside my door—

Would all these count for very much?
Or, would some little place in life,
Be yearning for a soothing touch
To calm the restlessness of strife?
Would some one miss me if I stayed,
Or from the path of duty strayed?

I need no answer to my thought,
No one need tell me aye or nay;
The answer comes unbid, unsought—
It is to live from day to day
As 'twere the last with God in sight,
And love and kindness infinite.
—S. B. McManus, in Ram's Horn.

A PUFF OF WIND.

It had been an unfortunate session for Miss Peek, the principal and proprietrix of the seminary for young ladies at No. 39 Blankview Terrace. About a year previously, in the fond expectation of receiving a large number of advanced pupils, Miss Peek had engaged several extra assistants capable of teaching advanced subjects at advanced salaries; but at the beginning of the session, in spite of diligent advertising and delivering of pink-covered prospectuses, her anticipations had been but meagerly realized.

Now, at the close of the last term, she had leisure to brood over the deplorable fact that she had paid more to her assistants than she had received from her pupils, and to wonder whether she could venture to carry on her establishment for another year. No one had any idea that she was in difficulties, for she had managed to scrape enough sovereigns together to settle with her assistants and to entertain the parents and friends of her pupils on the prize-giving day in such a fashion as to convince them that the school was in a most flourishing condition; and, while the parents and friends and the emancipated scholars gobbled up the fees and teas and buns provided for them in the music room, they little dreamed of the months of starvation which those dainties had cost Miss Peek, who at the moment was rushing about smiling and talking to everybody in the brightest manner imaginable. Even the housekeeper was ignorant of the true state of affairs; for Miss Peek early in the session had led her to believe that the wretched diet she indulged in was according to "doctor's orders."

It was not until the house was quiet and empty that Miss Peek, as has been said, came to consider the results of the dismal farce in which she had played the leading part for nearly ten months. The afternoon following the break-up she sat at the desk in her little parlor, poring over a ledger, every page of which bore some depressing detail. The window was open, for it was a blazing day in the end of June, and now and then a puff of warm wind stirred the fading hair on her temples and played flippantly with a sheaf of unpaid bills that lay on one side of the desk.

"Quite—quite hopeless!" sighed Miss Peek after three hours wrestling with figures. "All gone in two years! I should never have tried the school on my own account. It was better slaving away as assistant. And then that awful letter this morning from Curle & Coyle! I never thought I should have lived to receive such a letter." She picked up the document which lay among the unpaid bills, and regarded it with terror and disgust. "If I could only settle that, I think I could get the other people to wait till the beginning of next session—if I have a next session. But where on earth am I to get twenty-five pounds? And I once dreamed of helping them at home!" Miss Peek laid the letter aside, and bowed her head on the ledger.

Two tears trickled down the pounds and pence columns, and others would have followed had not a knock at the parlor door caused Miss Peek to arrest them ere they dropped. The unhappy lady sat up and blew her nose.

"Come in," she said, and blew her nose again.

"Professor Bumpus," said the housekeeper, ushering in the gentleman who had taught advanced mathematics to one advanced young lady during the past session. The professor taught in several ladies' schools, and had a few private pupils, whereby he earned a moderately uncomfortable income, the greater portion of which he spent on old books of alchemy and astrology. He had no one dependent on his exertions, and his few acquaintances were the proprietors of second-hand book shops. He was 45 and looked ten years older; his face was clean-shaven and wrinkled, he was tall and thin and he was the possessor of an immense head, destitute of hair and of a peculiar knobby appearance. Altogether he was far from being prepossessing, yet he had kindly eyes, and his smile, when he gave it liberty, was wonderfully genial.

He entered Miss Peek's parlor somewhat bashfully, and when the lady blew her nose for the fourth time he stammered something about hoping she had not contracted a summer cold, and begged leave to shut the window.

"Pray leave it open, professor," said Miss Peek, recovering herself, and closing the ledger with one hand while she gave him the other. "The weather is suffocating."

"True," returned the professor; "but you should be careful of chills. However, I suppose it's none of my business."

Miss Peek smiled in spite of her misery; the professor employed the latter phrase so often.

"I thought you were going off on a holiday to-day," she remarked.

"I leave to-night," he replied. "I—I merely called for a book I was careless enough to leave—a book on conic sections—in my class room. I wouldn't have troubled you, but the maid informed me that everything had been cleared from the school; and—"

"Yes. But I know where your book is. If you wait a moment I'll bring it to you. You are going to London, I suppose?"

The professor bowed, and replied in the affirmative. "London, or rather the British museum had been the scene of his annual holiday for years. By careful saving during the session he usually contrived to accumulate enough money to keep him there for a month; but this summer, by great fortune, he was the possessor of funds sufficient to sustain him for nearly double that period, and he was looking forward to a glorious spell of hard research among certain literary treasures of the museum. When Miss Peek had left the room to procure the volume on conic section, he smiled to himself and rubbed the left breast of his shabby frock-coat, within which reposed his pocket-book. He was going to have such a holiday!

He seated himself near the door and relapsed into pleasant meditation. Ere a minute had passed, however, he was disturbed, not by the entrance of Miss Peek, but by a piece of paper which a puff of wind blew across the room to his large, clumsily shod feet. He stooped to pick it up; but before he touched it his eye caught the following words in type-written characters: "...immediate payment, failing which we shall reluctantly be compelled—"

"What—what?" murmured Professor Bumpus; and, grabbing the letter, he proceeded to read it from beginning to end. It was an exceedingly peremptory demand for the payment of twenty-five pounds, ten shillings and three pence sterling, due, or rather overdue, to Messrs. Curle & Coyle the well-known money-lenders.

"Dear me!" said the professor to himself. "What a pity! However, I suppose it's none of my business." He stepped softly across the room, deposited the letter on the desk, and returned to his seat near the door. "I shouldn't have read it; but, somehow, I wasn't thinking. Never dreamed of her getting into debt, poor thing! Knew she wasn't making much; but—well, well! I suppose it's none of my business. Tut, what a fool I am! She was crying when I came in. That was why she blew her nose. Bless me! but it's rough on a woman. I wish—"

The flow of his thoughts was interrupted by the return of Miss Peek, who handed him the book he had inquired for, and smiled brightly as she did so.

"She's been washing her face, poor thing!" thought the professor. "Many thanks," he said aloud, flushing because of the feeling of guilt that possessed him. "Now, I—I won't intrude further. You—you'll let me know about the next session, please, when it suits you."

"Oh yes; I shall inform you in good time," returned Miss Peek bravely. "And I hope you will have a larger class than you had this last session, Professor Bumpus," she added, trying to laugh.

"Ha! ha! It can't be much smaller, anyhow! But I shouldn't wonder if you have a very full school in the autumn, Miss Peek. I really shouldn't be the least surprised. In fact, from conversations I had with the parents of your pupils yesterday, I'm inclined to believe—no, I'm certain, Miss Peek, that you will have many new pupils next session. Indeed, I—I—I—"

But Professor Bumpus was not a practiced liar, and his attempt at invention suddenly collapsed.

"Thank you," said Miss Peek, turning to look out of the window. "It's good of you to try to cheer me up, professor. To tell you the truth, it hasn't been a very brilliant session."

"Ah, well, you must look forward, and hope for better things. Good-by," he said abruptly.

Miss Peek escorted her visitor to the front door, where they parted with a commonplace exchange of wishes for a pleasant vacation. Then the schoolmistress returned to mourn over her ledger, and the professor hastened to his humble lodgings to attend to some correspondence and to prepare his modest belongings for the journey to London. At half-past eight his portmanteau was packed and strapped, and a few minutes later his landlady entered the sitting room to inform him that her boy was ready to assist him with his baggage to the station.

The professor took a final pull at his old pipe, knocked the ashes out of the bowl, and slipped it into his pocket. Then he sighed, and took out a worn purse.

"Give your boy this sixpence, Mrs. Stewart," he said, looking past his landlady. "I—I find I can't go to London."

"Well, of all the queer folk!" muttered Mrs. Stewart when she reached the kitchen. "Not that I'm wanting him away, poor man!" she added more gently.

By the post of the following afternoon Miss Peek received two letters.

The first, which she opened with trembling fingers and perused with misty eyes, began, "Dearest Maggie—Success at last!" and ended, "I'm afraid you've been having a hard fight, though you've never said much about it. But I'll put that right as soon as you'll let me. In other words, when will you marry me? My train arrives in the morning, and I'll come for your answer soon after you receive this—John."

"Oh, what a long ten years it has been!" sighed the schoolmistress, after which she dissolved in tears of joy.

It was fully an hour before she remembered the other letter; but when she opened it a slip of blue paper fell on her lap, and she read that "Messrs. Curle & Coyle had great pleasure in returning her promissory note, with their best thanks and compliments."

Shame and gratitude and love struggled in her heart, and under her breath she cried, "However did John find out? And how can I face him?"

Yet, when John, her sweetheart—all the way from Queensland—did arrive, she managed to face him tolerably well, and the evening passed without mention of such unsentimental and sordid things as debts and promissory notes; and though the following night she plucked up courage, and, with averted eyes, attempted to thank him, he stopped her at the first word and refused to hear a second. The fact was that John, having spent the morning in tidying up the financial affairs of his future father-in-law, naturally thought Maggie was trying to thank him on that score; wherefore, for the sake of her pride and his own, he begged her to consider the matter over and done with. So, when he had gone, Maggie burned the slip of blue paper and Messrs. Curle & Coyle's correspondence, and thanked God for sending John home to her, and prayed to be made worthy of his love.

One evening, about the end of August, Professor Bumpus, who was in an unusually restless mood, left his lodgings and his beloved books, and strolled west in the direction of Blankview Terrace. He had received no word about the reopening of the school; and, while he had no intention of calling at No. 39, he was curious to learn if Miss Peek was in town. He hoped she had been able to go away somewhere for a holiday, though, as he reflected, "it was no business" of his.

It was dusk when he passed the house; but something about it struck him as being unfamiliar. A few yards beyond the gate he halted and looked back. Then he perceived that the once bare windows were adorned with curtains and flower-boxes, and that the big brass plate which used to shine on the door had disappeared. "Poor thing!" sighed Professor Bumpus, "she's had to give up. Bless me! I might have sold some of my books and—"

At that moment the door opened and his late principal came down the steps on the arm of a handsome, middle-aged man. They did not notice the solitary figure standing in the dusk as they turned out of the gate in the opposite direction.

When they had disappeared round the corner the professor seemed to waken from a dream. He looked at the house for half a minute, then took out his old pipe, filled and lit it, and walked slowly homewards.

"I wonder who he is," he said to himself. "I'm thankful she never found out about the bill. Still, if—However, I suppose it's none of my business."—Chambers' Journal.

Southern Woman's Ready Wit.

The ready wit of southern women was the subject of comment at a recent gathering, and numerous illustrative anecdotes were told. One had to do with a Virginia belle of a generation ago—a member of the Clark county Taylors, famous in the social history of that state. Her betrothal to a worthy gentleman by the name of Mason had been announced at a formal function; and one young gentleman, whose hopes with regard to her had been crushed by the announcement, greeted her thus:

"May I beg to assure you that I am always yours, in spite of the fact, Miss Taylor, that I hear you are to change your vocation for that of Mason?"

She regarded him contemplatively for a moment, and then replied: "I am not quite certain of that, for having found a goose, I may decide to remain a Taylor."—Philadelphia Times.

FASHION'S LATEST ORDERS.

High heels no longer attract attention. Natural sticks take the lead in parasol handles.

Broad sailor collars are seen on some short taffeta jackets.

Never wear a shoe that pinches or presses into the hollow of the foot. Paris has issued an edict that black and cream are smarter than black and white.

Walking skirts make many women look better simply because they clutched their long skirts so awkwardly.

Straws are most beautiful now. Many of both the Tuscan and satin are seen, and in colors and tints to match, or to harmonize with all gowns. A most excellent hat for street wear is low, but turns up stylishly on each side.

Among the prettiest pongee waists are some made with a turnover to cuffs and collar embroidered, in small figures, a convenient design, the work having the effect of the Russian cross stitch, though as a matter of fact it is not, and done in red and black, or black with other colors.

Now they have ping-pong waists. They are out already. They are pongee waists, of course, have a line of color at the top of the stock, more color to match at the wrists, the pongee tie, with long ends, has a line of color finishing it, and—here the ping-pong comes in—embroidered upon the ends a ping-pong racquet and ball.

The tricorne hat does not appear to wane in popularity. Some of the prettiest spring models employ the shape, nor does the decoration hide the curves by any means. These lines are becoming to most features, particularly if worn a little off the face. The new frayed-out straw is well adapted to the tricorne shape, and such a hat needs nothing as a finish. This straw being sufficient. If the chrysanthemum straws are self-trimmed, they need not employ cabochons as a filling for the bare spaces.

The girl who knows how to sew will be dull indeed who has not a charming wardrobe this summer, for the new wash bodices are as simple as they are pretty. The daintiest of them are made of dimity, in pale colors and white, tucked all over, and showing lace insertions in straight and undulating bands. The popular sleeve for them is elbow length. The neck is finished with an unlined stock in the waist materials and the garment fastens at the back with small pearl or linen buttons.

HOME GARDEN HINTS.

Plan and choose colors carefully. Plenty of color is desirable, but contradictory colors running rampant detract from fine effects.

The garden pinks are among the most satisfactory of the old-fashioned flowers coming into renewed favor. They bloom plentifully, are fine in shape, size and color, and they come again cheerfully year after year.

Well started hollyhocks will bloom this season if the plants purchased are old enough. Make sure of this before buying. Nothing could possibly please a flower or color lover better than a row or mass of these simple and yet charming beauties.

Tall blue larkspurs may be planted back of the beds of hardy lilies for fine effects of line and color. The yellow day lily, the white swamp lily, and some of the spotted varieties look glorious in such a location, and plenty of surrounding foliage enhances the effect.

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

An Ingenious Treatment by which Drunkards are Being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Noxious Doses. No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that Drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure themselves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonderful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men.

WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS! This remedy is in no sense a nostrum but a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued drinking of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluged by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of everybody a treatment more effectual than the others costing $25 to $50. Full directions accompany each package. Special advice by skilled physicians when requested without extra charge. Sent prepaid to any part of the world on receipt of One Dollar. Address: H. G. BESSIE AT THE SPRING.

The daisies nod merely one to another,
The marigolds cling to the hem of her gown,
The chickens desert their excitable mother
To clamor for favor when Bessie comes down.
With her pail to the spring. Oh, red and white roses,
Not fairer are they all a-bloom in the grass
Than the bloom of her cheek; see how graceful she poses
To watch the cloud shadows that lazily pass,
While birds linger praiseful on fluttering wing.
When hazel-eyed Bessie comes down to the spring,
The rabbit peeps shyly from out his sweet cover
Of thick blossomed lilacs adorning the slope
To gaze with the eloquent eyes of a lover
Where Bessie comes tripping like radiant Hope
From the dream of a poet, her loose-flowing tresses
With arrows of sunlight shot many times thro'
And Bessie comes lowing to meet her caresses,
The grass showing dark where she scatters the dew.
And backward and forward complacently swing
The windows when Bessie comes down to the spring.
Her charms owe no tax to the law of cold fashion,
She had all her grace from the glorified One,
And her veins are as free of the latter-day passion
As meadow stream kissed by the beams of the sun.
From scene-painted grotto no fairies beguile her
In opera fashioned to mountebank's art,
But she hears the lark's melody ripple ecstatic
And full from his throat whereon lieth his heart.
Then up through the meadow with giant-like swing
Comes Reuben to welcome sweet Bess at the spring.

His Friend,
The Enemy

By WILLIAM WALLACE COOK
Author of "Rogers of Butte," "The Spur of Necessity," "Mr. Fitt, Astrologer," etc.

"Please don't misunderstand me, Mr. Herbert," returned Miss Betty. "My father's ruling passion is real estate. He wanted to sell you some lots in Harmony, and, for fear you wouldn't be where he could watch you, he insisted on having you come here. That was also his reason for taking you to the meeting and he had not the slightest notion he was harboring an enemy." Miss Betty laughed again. "At heart," she resumed, "my father is one of the noblest men in the world, but I cannot remember that he ever championed a losing cause. Whenever he enters a fight he goes in to win. With my aid he is going to be victorious in this county seat affair." She spoke decisively. I don't know your real motive for coming here, but I presume you wanted to look over the rival town and find out what chance there was for Concord retaining its prestige.

"That was partly it," admitted Guy. "But I also wished to attend the meeting and find out, if I could, what move your side intended to make."

"Col. Keever suggested that, did he not?"

"It was suggested to me."

"And you endeavored to follow out this counsel against your better judgment?"

"I am very sorry now that I acted on the suggestion at all."

"You are too much of a gentleman for this sort of work, Mr. Herbert. A county seat contest of this kind is a very disagreeable affair."

"Why should there ever have been a contest?"

"That was because Concord stole the county seat from Harmony in the first place. The vote was close and the canvassing board bought by Col. Keever, threw out a sufficient number of Harmony votes to give the county seat to Concord." The blue eyes snapped and the thin nostrils dilated. "For this reason the question has been reopened, Mr. Herbert, and it is for this reason, also, that I am heart and soul in the conflict. I will have no violence but Col. Keever may have to be met with his own weapons in order that right and justice may prevail. We can be good enemies and good friends as well, and after the election—" she smiles—"we will try to forget the disagreeable incidents of the campaign."

"With all my heart!" declared Guy. She offered him her hand and he pressed the little palm cordially.

At that moment they heard running feet along the road by the gate, angry shouts and now and then the report of a revolver. Betty sprang up and hurried to a window.

"There's a mob in front," she said, quietly, "but you need have no fears. Mr. Herbert. You are just as safe under this roof as you would be in Concord."

Guy greatly admired her calmness, but she underestimated his courage. If she thought for a moment that he was frightened. Before he could reply, Mr. Vlandingham hurried into the room, coming from the rear of the house.

"I've got a horse at the barn, Herbert, all saddled, bridled and waiting," he said, quickly. "I don't want to alarm you, but some of those rascals out there are drunk and Barney has told them everything. You'd better go. I might be powerless to protect you."

Some one jingled the bell furiously. A scuffling of feet and muttering of hoarse voices came from the porch

"There they are," said Betty. "You talk with them at the door, father. While I show Mr. Herbert where he can find the horse."

Vlandingham started for the hall, but paused to reach out his hand to Guy.

"I don't believe you knew what kind of a hornets' nest you were going to get into over here, Herbert. You've got Betty on your side, I can see that, and I don't lay up any hard feelings. I'd advise you, though, to give this burg a wide berth in future. You see, I hold the winning cards in this fight and can afford to be magnanimous."

Guy wrung Vlandingham's hand and followed Betty outside to a post where a horse was hitched. Untying the halter he vaulted into the saddle. Betty directed him how to go.

"I hope I shall see you again, Miss Vlandingham," he observed.

"You may see me when you least expect it," she answered.

"I will send the horse back to-morrow."

"Any time that you find it convenient will be soon enough. Remember, we are enemies on county seat matters."

"And friends on all others?"

"If you wish it."

"I do wish it. Good-by."

She waved her hand and he sped away into the night.

CHAPTER IV.

Guy had a lonely ride back to Concord over the broad, flat, star-lit lands. He could see the road dimly, a lightish streak cutting the darker turf of the plains. A moist, lush smell arose from the dewy grass and the croaking of frogs, the chirping of crickets and the resonant boom of the bittern floating from the sedge served only to intensify the stillness.

There was far more to this county seat business than Guy had imagined. Miss Betty felt that Harmony had been cheated out of its rights and that was the cause of her inexorable stand in the present contest. Two-thirds of the voters in the county had signed a petition for a special election and it was a foregone conclusion that these two-thirds would vote for Harmony. Without doubt this was the premise on which Mr. Vlandingham and his daughter were building their hopes, but Guy had information relative to Col. Keever's imported voters. He did not know what the voting strength of the county was, but he was sure the Colonel had been sharp enough to bring in sufficient ballots to overcome the two-thirds majority. The young man did not fancy this phase of the question, although the entire contest was gradually presenting itself to him as a case of diamond cut diamond. He had been brought up in abhorrence of "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain," but now that he was in Rome why should he not emulate the Romans? To take any other stand was equivalent to bankrupting himself, for what chance would Concord have if he ordered the Colonel's imported voters out of the town or permitted them to exercise the right of franchise unflinched? If ordered away they might flock to Harmony in a body, and if permitted to vote as they pleased they might be subsidized by agents of Vlandingham. The matter was a delicate one and to be handled with extreme caution. The temptation to look out for himself at all costs was a powerful one, and had not Miss Betty herself said that it was right for him to do all he could to keep the county seat at Concord? Taking everything into consideration, Guy thought it would be well to lay back on his oars, watch the opposition and see what happened.

He had a number of thoughts concerning Miss Betty entirely apart from the political question, and in the fairer fields where they were to esteem each other as friends. These were headstrong fancies and so vividly tinted with the hues of youth that they were more properly dreams and not to be chronicled.

Arrived at Concord, Guy left the horse at the livery barn and made his way along the dark and deserted street to the Lisbon house.

This hotel was under the proprietorship of a Portuguese. Being unable to pronounce his name, the people of Concord rose up and bestowed upon him the patronymic of "Smith." Retaining his multitude of Christian names, his full title thus became Pedro Fernandez Jose Manuel Smith. This was, of course, altogether too long for a pioneer community, and when Pedro Fernandez was not plain Smith he was Pedro, or "Cinch"—which was practically the same.

Almost any day Pedro might be seen sitting in front of his establishment, wearing his light apron and square white cap, his legs crossed, elbows on his knee, complacently swinging his suspended foot and puffing at a corn-cob pipe. It was thus that Guy found the proprietor when he came out from breakfast on the morning after his ride from Harmony.

The early train from the west had just stopped at the station as Guy took a chair on the porch and lighted a cigar.

"Quite an excitement when the trains come in," observed Pedro. "So it seems," returned Guy, looking at the little throng which had gathered on the piazza and part of which was visible around the ends of the station building. He saw Mr. Glimmer and Lemuel Bilkins, among others, and gave especial attention to a slender youth whose fiery hair curled fringingly about the edges of his old cap. This latter individual was throwing a canvas bag into the open door of the mail car.

"That's Sampson," ventured Pedro, noting the direction of Guy's gaze; "works for the Colonel, and is just throwing on the east-bound bundle of this week's blizzard. Here's a copy of it, if you'd like to run it over. It's a mighty warm number—county seat war is gettin' interestin'."

Pedro pulled the paper out from under his apron and Guy examined it lazily. There was a red-hot leader, the Colonel's scorching style, picking the county commissioners to tatters and then holding these remnants up to public contumely. The intrinsic value of the article did not interest Guy quite so much as something else. He produced the note which Mr. Vlandingham had handed him at the town meeting the night before—N. B.—He was treasuring that scrap simply and solely because of Miss Betty's penciled message to her father at the bottom of it. Turning the note over, he perused the writing on the back, as he had done once before that morning.

The chirography was a blotted scrawl and the ink was purple in color. Guy remembered that the ink which the Colonel had jarred out of its stand on the preceding afternoon was of that identical hue. Yet this was not all. The writing on the back of that note was the counterpart of a fraction of the leader, word for word, comma for comma and exclamation point for exclamation point. Had Guy a piece of the "copy" in his hands? Was here a clew to the identity of the "broom man" mentioned by Barney?

"Jee-mi-nee!" broke from Pedro Smith, as he got up from his chair. "Here come three passengers from the west. We don't get many from that direction."

Guy thrust the note back into his pocket and looked towards the station. The train had gone and the curious citizens were headed back towards the business section of the town. Lemuel was carrying the mail sacks for Mr. McQuilkin, a task which he performed proudly and regularly for the mere glory of it; Sampson, a little time at his disposal now that the week's issue was out of the way, had lighted a cigarette and was sauntering leisurely; Mr. Glimmer had been expecting his wife's sister from Bismarck, and it cannot be said that he wore a very disappointed look because she had failed to arrive. Waffle was of the party, and his shadow, Bill Comfort, and several more.

The attention of the group of citizens was riveted upon the three arrivals who walked in advance and headed for the hotel. Two of these were women, ostensibly Sisters of Charity, and closely veiled. The third was a man, under medium height and enveloped from head to heels in a garment that was much too large for him. His hat was drawn down over his forehead and the collar of his ill-fitting coat was turned up about his ears. That attire was exceedingly warm for that season of the year and Sampson gazed the stranger in frequent asides to Lem Bilkins.

The Sisters of Charity passed into the hotel, ushered by the obsequious Pedro. The little man in the long coat likewise entered the office and took a seat in one corner rigidly erect and not deigning to unbutton his coat. The citizens halted in front of the veranda to stare and speculate—all save Bilkins, who was due at the post office.

"Crackly!" exclaimed Sampson, looking hard at Guy. The printer started to say something more, but bit his words off short.

"What's the matter?" asked Guy, wondering at the mystified expression of the youth's face.

"Oh, nothing," replied Sampson, backing away.

"My dear Herbert!" cooed the familiar voice of Col. Keever, as that gentleman rounded the corner of the hotel and advanced upon Guy precipitately. "You look well," added the Colonel, significantly, dropping a hand on the young man's shoulder. Then he stooped and whispered: "How did you come out?"

Before Guy could answer the little man in the ill-fitting coat plunged out on the veranda and halted at the Colonel's side.

"Hat!" cried the little man, furiously. "I have come into the jackal's lair to pay my respects to the jackal-in-chief. Archibald Keever, you are an impudent scoundrel, sir! You are an ill-mannered blackguard, sir! You have not the first instinct of a gentleman. You are a coward, do you hear me? A coward and a knave! My hat in your teeth, sir!"

The little man jerked off his slouch hat revealing two eyes, one of which gleamed glassily at Guy while the other traveled up and down the full extent of Col. Keever's anatomy; then the blow fell across the Colonel's face.

It all came about with paralyzing suddenness. The crowd of Concordians stared and gaped as though under some baneful spell. The little man was Col. Dingle, of Harmony! The next instant Guy had leaped to his feet.

A shudder of mighty passion convulsed Col. Keever. His hand tightened convulsively at the head of his cane.

"Sir," he shouted, "is it your intention to apply to me those hurling epithets?"

Come to think of it afterwards, there was little use of the Colonel's question; but great minds often wish to be absolutely certain of both horns of a proposition before tackling the conclusion. The little man laughed mockingly.

"I have coupled the word with a blow!" he cried. "In order that you may satisfy yourself I have made no mistake, I will strike again, so! The Northern greets the Blizzard!"

Again came that swishing blow with the hat and Col. Keever, dazed for the moment, fanned imaginary flies from before his face.

"It's Dingle!" gasped Col. Keever, hoarsely. "Hold me, somebody! Hold me, or I shall kill him!"

Mr. Glimmer hurled himself into the breach and caught Keever about the waist, while Pedro Smith dashed out of the hotel and threw himself upon Dingle. Then, struggling ineffectually to free themselves, the two Colonels glared at each other.

"You are a sneak, sir, and a coward, sir!" screamed the editor of the Northern.

"Hold me tight, Glimmer," hissed the editor of the Buzzard through his grinding teeth. "I am not myself! Right now I'm making a demon of me! If I were to swoop down on that misguided man nothing would be left to tell the tale."

"Let him go!" cried Dingle, frantically; "I dare you to let him go!"

"A Harmony man!" howled the citizens, pushing angrily forward and surrounding the diminutive person with the glass eye.

"He must be a spy!" roared a voice. "String him up!" echoed another.

"Lynch him! Lynch him! Lynch him!" swelled the chorus.

"Stand back!" shouted Guy, shouldering his way to Dingle's side.

"Get a rope!" tumbled the crowd. "Next to Vlandingham he's the worst enemy this town has got! Make an enemy of him!"

Guy halted in front of Dingle and kept the crush back with his strong arms.

"We must get him out of here, Pedro," said Guy, breathlessly. "If we don't, some of these hot-heads will get us all into trouble. Where can we take him?"

"I've got a room upstairs that we can lock him in," replied Pedro, and the people, catching the last words, voiced the fierce demand:

"Lock him up! Put him under lock and key until we decide what to do with him!"

"I want to help you, Dingle," said Guy, in the little man's ear. "Don't be foolish, go with us and we'll do what we can for you."

Dingle was sullenly defiant, but he yielded to Guy and Pedro and accompanied them into the hotel and up the broad stairs leading to the second floor, the crowd pushing and plunging after them.

NEVER MET DEFEAT.

Famous Dukes and Generals of the Old World Who Won Every Battle They Went Into.

Te duke of Alva, one of the most eminent soldiers of the sixteenth century, never throughout his long and eventful career lost a battle. The archbishop of Cologne was struck by his effort to avoid a conflict, having on one occasion urged him to engage the Dutch, says the New York Herald.

"The object of a general," replied Alva, "is not to fight, but to conquer; he fights enough who obtains the victory."

Oliver Cromwell throughout his military career never lost a battle, though he very nearly sustained a reverse at Dunbar.

The duke of Marlborough fought several battles against the most experienced generals in Europe and was never once defeated.

The famous Russian general Suwaroff was another commander destined never to suffer defeat. He gained several victories against the Turks and against the Poles, and in Italy he was opposed by Moreau, and, being completely outnumbered, he effected a brilliant retreat over the mountains of Switzerland, through Germany, into Russia.

The duke of Wellington throughout his brilliant campaigns, both in India and in the peninsula, preserved to himself a remarkable record of uninterrupted successes from the first battle in which he was vested with supreme command throughout the peninsula war, in which he defeated the ablest of Napoleon's marshals, until the eventful day of Waterloo.

Bandages and Red-Tape.

During the South African war Rudyard Kipling discovered, at Cape Town, a hospital without bandages, and in desperate need of them. This, too, was in a city where bandages were for sale in many shops. He told an acquaintance that he was going to meet that want, and the gentleman at once offered to pay for all the bandages that Mr. Kipling would buy and take to the hospital. A cart was quickly loaded, and then the author was informed that, under the army rules, the hospital authorities could not receive supplies from a private individual.

"Well," said he, "I will dump the packages on the pavement before the door, and then tell them to come out and clear up the litter. Perhaps they can get them into the building in that way without tearing any red tape."

He drove off with the bandages, and the supplies were somehow smuggled into the hospital.—Youth's Companion.

He Was Tired.

"Down in South Carolina," said Representative Talbert, "I once attended a colored church. The preacher, one of those negroes with an oily face and big spectacles, was talking about the prophets. He had taken an hour to discourse upon the major prophets and then he took up the minor ones. In course of time he reached Hosea. 'My brethren,' he exclaimed, 'we come now to Hosea. Let us consider him. Where shall we put Hosea?' At that moment an old negro who had been peacefully slumbering in one of the back pews woke up and looked at the pastor. 'Hosea can take my seat,' he said. 'I am so tired that I am going home.'"

Performed a Filial Duty.

Joe was such a pathetic little man. He came from a quarter of the city where crime and misery had formed a background for the five weary years of his unnatural little life. He was late to kindergarten one morning, and was asked to sit by the door until the morning exercises were over. Before being restored to grace the teacher asked him why he was so late. "Well," replied Joe, "the patrol came after my mother, and I waited to see her off."

Millions of Fish.

Great attention is being paid this year by the Wisconsin Fish Commission to the stocking of the streams and lakes of that state. Fifteen million pike fry and two million muscalonge are to be distributed in the Wisconsin lakes, and it is proposed by the Wisconsin authorities to give the visitor to that state this summer plenty of sport with rod and line.

The Chicago & North-Western Railway, which reaches all the principal fishing resorts in Wisconsin and Northern Michigan, announces favorable excursion rates and special train service from Chicago and Milwaukee this summer to take care of what they anticipate will be the largest movement to Wisconsin resorts that has ever been known.

Reaction.

To Preserve, Purify, and Beautify
the Skin, Hands, and Hair
Nothing Equals

Cuticura SOAP

MILLIONS of WOMEN Use CUTICURA SOAP, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, the great skin cure, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No other medicated soap is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands
